The sgitation of the tariff at this time tends to ag-gravate business troubles. A permanent tariff, even if not just right, is far preferable to change, or the fear of change. The re medy for the evils alluded to is now being applied. It is (1) a reduced production of manufactured goods. This is, in a sure, accomplished, there being a general im-

TOUCHED THEIR LOWEST POINT, and that it is safe to operate in any kind of mer-chandisa. (2.) This feeling and the enforced economy that has been inaugurated will surely re-establish credits and put business on a proper footing. If to these means of recu-ation we can add new foreign markets for our order of the day, and I think that those who have withstood the severe test thus far deserve congratulation and can console themselves that the worst is over. In the West we have all the elements of prosperity, except confidence, and that is gradually returning. The rapid accumulation of money in financial centers is unprofitable and is becoming burdensome. Its owners are now seeking borrowers, and the result will be its general dissemination throughout the country, which will give a NEW IMPETUS to all branches of business. The South is getting prices for her cotton, and is buying her flour and bacon lower than ever before. The West has a large surplus of wheat and corn, and while prices are very low everything which these products buy has also declined. So that the purchasing power of a bushel of grain has seldom been greater than it is to-day. The wholesale legislation which has been going on has forced us to attempt to market our surplus too rapidly, and the consuming countries have taken advantage of the situation, but the first manifestation on our part to become indifferent sellers has made them eager buyers, as evidenced during the past two days in which wheat has advanced from three to four cents in nearly every market. From the president of the Kansas City Board of Trade. "I. The cause of the present depression arises from the building of more industrial establishments than the wants of the country require. S. The extent is general, probably felt MORE IN THE MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS than in the agricultural. Failures in this section are not more numerous than in former years and are largely confined to speculators or very small dealers. S The remedy should be prudence and economy in all pursuits; the cutting down of stocks to the smallest requirement of trade and a liberal policy by banks to the reliable and solvent trade. 4 The outlook is promising."

From the president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce: "So far as I can see, there is no depression in mercantile business here, other than that incident to a short cotton crop. There has been, and is, a depression in speculative real estate, caused by the excessive stringency of the money market during the past summer. Our manufactories are generally in fair condition, except the cotton mills. These have, for the past four months, been depressed from an overproduction. This matter, however, is correcting itself and nearly all the mills are now moving on full time, and claim to be making small profits. I have written informally and briefly concerning the first three topics you propose. Now, as to

New York, January 5.—Aristocratic circles in Astoria, Long Island City, were considerably exercised yesterday over the announcement that Mrs. Chambers, 45 years of ago and the widow of George G. Chambers, had been married to her step-son, Mr. Haroid Chambers, aged 21. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mrs. Chambers, No. 48 E. Thirtieth street, this city, on New Year's Eve, in the presence of the young bridegroom's grandfather uncle and aunt. Mrs. Chambers was a widow before uncle and aunt. Mrs. Chambers was a widow before the had five children by his first wife, the oldest of the bressens as widow and had been married twice. He had five children by his first wife, the oldest of the whom is 25 years old, and the second youngest, the present husband of his last wife. 21. Mrs. Chambers' relatives protested against the union with her stepon, but she said:

"1LOVE HIM AND HE LOVES ME, and I know of no reason why I should not marry him." The brothers and sisters of the groom also objected to the marriage, but the young man said: "Oh, well, she's westiful, and I know of no reason why I should not marry him." When Captain McCullagh, superintendent of the road arrived at the stables this morning the men were standing about idly, and nothing had been done in the way of proceeding with the day's business. When she time for starting out the first car fell due at 5:18 a. m., he ordered the car out, but the regular driver flatly refused to perform his duty. An effort was made to find a substitute, but not a willing hand could be found. The strike was unanimous, and while all the men were orderly and had no intention of resorting to violence of any kind even should green men be employed to succeed them, there was an evident determination among them not to be bulldozed into working for what they termed "starvation wages." Recognizing that it was impossible to do anything in the premises without further authority, Captain McCulagh telephoned for J. G. Chapman, president of the road, who arrived on the scene at about 8 o'clock. When the strikers saw Mr. Chapman, they held a brief consultation and appointed Fred Lankston, Con. Murphy, Villips, Kendall and Gleeson four of their number, a committee to coufer with him. After a short consultation both sides agreed to a compromise, and, instead of a reduction from $1.85 per day to $1.60, the company split the difference and decided to allow the men $1.75 for a day of twelve hours.

A Post-Disparced reported who approached Capt. McCullagh upon the matter was assured that there would be no further difficulty, and that the cars would be run on time as heretofore. "The mon are all satisfied," said the superintendent, "and the only inconvenience that we experienced was in losing the two early morning trips—the first car starting from the Water Tower at 9 o'clock instead of 5:18, as it usually does. Our men are receiving to-day, and have always received, at least since the strike four years ago.

higher wages and shorter hours than the employes of any other line in the city. You will remember that at the time of the big strike the Beliefontaine was the first that acceeded to the just demands of the men and that we lost little or no time. We recognized the fact that they were in the right, and Mr. Chase, who was then tireir president, proposed to the board of directors to run two cars with three men instead of with two, making a working day twelve hours in place of eighteen, and thereby granting them the relief asked for. The arrangement was understood to be merely temporary, however, but it has been in force ever since. We paid the men $1 85 by the day, regardless of time, though more than twelve hours has never been insisted upon. Of late the business depression has been general, and we have suffered as well as other branches. Why, as an instance, let me cite the fact that on the day before Christmas, which is considered the biggest day of the winter with us, we carried 1,000 passengers less than on the corresponding day of last year, and the receipts have been falling off in proportion on other days. The company has been losing money in consequence, and naturally the directory deemed it incumbent upon them to cut down the expenses as much as possible. The drivers, through the company's generosity in the past, having enjoyed better pay than the men on other roads, it was thought that they would be willing to suffer a slight inconvenience or at least be placed upon the same footing as others engaged in the same vocation for a brief space of time until the outlook was more encouraging and travel had increased. The proposition of three men on other roads, it was thought that they would be willing to suffer a slight inconvenience or at least be placed upon the same footing as others en

The conductors of the double cars work on an average welve hours a day, and, making about one trip an hour, receive at the rate of 15-12 cents a trip, about $1.90 a day. The only thing they find cause to grunnible at now, if they do thing they find cause to grunnible at now, if they do tat all, is the infrequency of the long run. They may claumor for more work but there need be no fear that the companies of this city, if I can see any distance ahead, will be induced to lower their men's wages to any distressing point."

A Giant Struggle Over the January Wheat Deal.

Ever Made in This Market-Dave Francis Offers 250,000 Bushels of January Wheat at 92 Cents and Mose Fraley Snaps it Up.

A "corner" in January wheat in this market has been the bugaboo of the unfortunates who are short not is difficult to arrive at, as it is almost too early in the month for one to materialize. The fact re-mains, however, that January wheat is away above the next option in price; that it is treading close January here is relatively far above the same month in any other market, and that most of the shorts are badly frightened. Some time ago the el shorts are badly frightened. Some time ago the difference in price between January and May wheat here was between 8 and 9 cents, and to-day at the same time the two months were only 4½ cents apart. The price here to-day was also within ½ cent of January in New York and 9½ cents above January in Foledo, both winter wheat markets. D. R. Francis Bros. is the firm credited with having had control of the deal. They were said to hold a large line of short contracts, besides holding most of the stock of No. 2 red (the speculative grade and the only kind that can be delivered upon contracts) that is now in elevators here. The prinpal shorts have been the Fraley-Carter Commission of the firm. They owe a good deal more than this to Francis, but have enough owing to them by other parties to reduce their actual shortage to the above amount. Having possession of most of the cash wheat here and holding a good line of shorts, Francis Bros. were supposed to hold the sugar end of the stick. Especially was this so, as they had their cash wheat soid for May at a difference in value between the price they paid for their cash and January wheat and for which they have it sold for May, so that it paid them good carrying charges, insured them against loss in their cash and January and gave them a dumping ground for all the cash they held or that might be delivered them.

Why, I have been trying to hold her down for a couple weeks past and I must have lost a couple of hundred thousand bushels in doing so. See here. I sold this morning five at 88% cents and Sid sold five at 89 cents, that the shorts sre climbing for January.

"No, I cannot," he replied, "but it must be large from the way the shorts are climbing for January.

"No, I cannot," he replied, "but it must be large from the way the shorts are climbing for January.

"No, I cannot," he replied, "but it must be large from the way the shorts are climbing for January.

"No, I cannot," he replied, "but it must be large from the way the shorts are climbing for January.

"No, I cann difference in price between January and May wheat here was between 8 and 9 cents, the call went on.

"THIS MEANS BLOOD,"
remarked a dealer. Francis had the "Fraley crowd too dead to skin, but Fraley by that stroke of his has put the boot on the other leg, I think."

Another party speaking of it, said: "Well, Fraley got out of his January wheat and Francis made a good thing out of it. His profits are just the difference between 8 and 9 cents, at which he bought the January and sold the May; and 4½ cents to-day, which is the present difference between the two months."

to-day, which is the present difference between the two months."

Others say that as Fraley now has Francis heavily short in May, he will attempt to work him on that racket. It was noticeable on the call that Fraley, Bowman, and Ben Barnes, who are in what is known as the "Fraley crowd," were buying all the May they could. After this noon call there was something of a struggle still going on over the market. Francis came in the pit and offered January at 92 cents, at which he sold 50,000 to Fraley, and afterwards it went down to 91 1-2 cents. Fra. ley, on the other hand was, bidding 97 cents for 250,000 May, and 97 1-2 cents (this about one cent over what the option was then selling at) for one lot of a million bushels. At one time he struck an attitude and shouted, "The January deal is busted, and I did it."

T. G. Bowman, one of the firm of Fraley, "Carter."

shouted, "The January deal is busted, and I did it."

T. G. Bowman, one of the firm of Fraley, Carter and Co., in reply to questious said that while the purchase of 250,000 cash wheat did not cover all their shortage, they had enough coming in from other parties to more than put them even on the deal. It is said the end is not yet.

After the close of the forenoon session, D. R. Francis called upon Moses Fraley and offered to give him January contracts in place of the cash money wheatsold him on the call. After some talk, Fraley consented to this arrangement.

"This January deal has received its death blow" remarked Fraley this afternoon. "Francis was trying to run a corner and he did not have me short. But look here, I had six times as much May wheat bought as I had January sold so that if January had gone up six cents and May only one cent, yet I could not lose any money."

"D. P. Rowland, Esq. Chairman:

"DEAR SIR—I have received notice of my nomination for the office of president of the Merchants' Exchange at the caucus on Saturday. While I fully appreciate the honor conferred I most respectfully decline to accept the nomination. Having been one of the earliest and heartiest supporters of Mr. Heary C. Haarstick for president, permit me to say that in electing him the Exchange will, in my opinion, honor itself. He 'stands as the representative of the great water route to the sea, having by his efforts and investments furnished to the commercial interests of St. Louis what they so much need, successful competition with the railway routes to the Atlantic coast. Respectfully. Ronkert B. Brown."

CONGRESSMAN BURNES of Misssouri is as good a judge of job opportunities as there is in Congress. As a member of the House Committee on Appropriations, he was in a position to ascer tain the true inwardness of the Nicaraguan treaty scheme when Secretary Frelinghuysen was begging for a secret service appropriation of $250,000 in that connection. Now, when Mr. Burnes rises up and tells the people that a scheme to divide a million and a half among certain parties in Nicaragua and the United States is only one of the jobs hidden in the belly of that treaty, there can be no doubt that the jobs are there, and that Mr. BURNES is not in any of them.

LETTERS from anonymous gentlemen of alleged "experience and distinction in diplomatic affairs" are beginning to appear in the cable dispatches warning us that we must prepare for war with Germany and France on account of that Spanish treaty. Germany and France, we are told, are about to bully Spain because she concedes so much to the United States, and that we will be bound by every sentiment of honor to take Spain's side. What midsummer madness! Spain has conceded to us nothing but the privilege of surrendering a revenue of $25,000,000 a year from Cuban products to save Cuba from bankruptcy, the privilege of admitting Cuba free as a seller to the benefits of our protected markets in order that she may still be able to pay over to Spanish taxgatherers all that we give to her. The idea that we will not be permitted to enjoy this sweet boon unless we fight for it, and go into an alliance with England, Spain and Italy against Germany and France, is entirely too thin to-survive the inclemency of this winter

In the interest of the court of good Qu to bend them down toward a straight line, and con-sequently lengthens them. This result is accelerat-ed by either the "spring" of the bridge, or the gum wood blocks spoken of by Prof. Johnson, or ished ladies. When Mr. Arthur became Presi across the bridge in their present form and it will be considerably longer than the horizontal distance between the two ends. Imagine them having no support and a train running over them and the tendency would be to "bulge" in front of the train and lengthen at the other end. Now, be the "spring" or "give" in the bridge ever so small, it is reasonable to suppose the result would be the same. The reason that this creeping never occurs on land is because the resistance of the earth is too great to allow a track to bend toward a horizontal. The fact that this phenomena is only found on arched bridges is evidence that there must be something in this reasoning. I do not insist that these are the only reasons for this "creeping," but being very much interested in the article, I eliminated these ideas from some thought on the subject, and find in them more plausible reasons, to me, than any I have seen. I notice in this evening's issue of the Post-Dispatch.

Patch an intensting article discussing the creeping of the rails on the St. Louis bridge, and giving the various reasons which have been assigned as causes leading to such a result. The records which have been kept of this unexampled case of rail-creeping seem to clearly indicate that the motion of the rails is in the direction of the traffic passing over them. If this be a fact, it appears to the writer that the first remedy which would suggest itself to those annoyed by the evil would be to reverse the direction of the traffic, and thus reverse the rail-motion.

GUYING A BORE.

How They Treat a Teller of Twice Told Tales in the Wild West.

I think that one reason there are so few g story-tellers among us is that the listeners in many instances, so willfully and so stornly unappreciative that it tends town discouraging the skillful narration of first-canecdotes.

There were four of us together coming and "the divide" a few years ago, and this prigle was then and there elucidated. Gild Gregg, and myself were congenial acqua ances, and we would have enjoyed the ride, if it had not been for a man named S sage, who had only recently escaped from slow-priced educational institution. He had quired a few cast-iron facts of the cyclop variety, and with the odor of the valedicall through his clothes he was making a touthe coast and Colorado. He was what your variety, and with the odor of the valedictory all through his clothes he was making a tour of the coast and Colorado. He was what you may call one of those really statistical, hrainy young reservoirs of imformation who burst forth from the Alma Mater with the intention of going to Congress in two years, but finally compromise the matter forty years later by running for Overseer of Highways and getting snowed under by about 187 majority.

When Gibbon saw Mr. Sawsage get on the stage he said to me in a low voice, "Nye, we are undone.' Sawsage will doubtless endeavor to relate some anecdote to us on the way, and then I shall commit an atrocious crime."

But he didn't do so the first ten miles. He contented himself by shedding other information, and explaining things that he had just found in his physical geography, and stunning us with the hard words that always dont around in the aquarium which young men reference the state of the state of the contented the set of the contented threself and words that always dont around in the aquarium which young men reference the state of the contented the con around in the aquarium which young men relet to as their brains.

Finally, however, some one reminded him d a story. Gregg tried to turn the conversation, but it was offno use. Said he: "It seems that many years ago a traveler or tourist description, whose name is immateria "Funny name," said Gregg. " think so, Gibbon?"

"Yes. Foreigner, probably. I knew a man amed Jimmy Terrial, once though." We discussed the name for four or five niles, and then allowed Sawsage to proeed.
"Well, as I was going to say the tourist, raveler, or sojourner was propounding inquirie elative to the climatic changes and isotherms miles. Then we allowed the narrative to proceed.

"Well, at last, to make a long story short, the traveler and a native of this country—"

"Remember his name?" asked Gregg. "We've got the other man's name. We ought to have this one."

"No," says Sawsaga. "I didn't give the tourist's name, you remember."

"I beg pardon," said Gregg. "I don't want to seem querulous and all the time kicking up a row with a comparative stranger, but you certainly gave us the other gentleman's name.

We then had a long and highly enjoyable quarrel, during which Gibbon and I challenged Gregg and Sawsage to fight us in a dark room, each man to be blind folded and armed with an adz. Best man to pay all funeral expenses and scrub out the room next day.

To this Gregg agreed, but Sawsage said he wasn't a very expert adzman, and wanted to apolgize.

Gibbon and I besitated. Finally we agreed apolgize.

From the Washington Star,
Some of the members of Congress have been Some of the members of Congress have been looking through the old Congressional Globe to find the names of the two members who were referred to by Mr. Vest, in his speech the other day, as having printed exactly the same speech in the records of the House. The two men were William—better known as "Foghern" Allen, and B. H. Nugen, both of Ohio. On the 24th of April, '82, Allen made a "speech on the "Confiscation of rebel property." and a few days later. May 6, Nugent, under a leave to print, published the same speech in the Globe as his own. The story of how the thing happened is thus told: Nugen wanted to make a speech, but did not know what to say. "While looking around for a way out of the difficulty he came acraos a newspaper man, who offered to write a speech for him if he paid for it. So the speech was written, but when it was delivered the Congressman objected to paying the $50 charged by the scribe for his services, and they parted, the newspaper man still holding the manuscript and the Congressman disconsolate. late. At the end of a week, however, the Congressman went to the scribe and said that it was an extortion and he was being taken advantage of, but he had concluded to pay the $50. When the time came for him to speak he rose proudly and asked leave to print. But meanwhile Mr. Allen had electrified the House with his eloquence, and when the two speeches were compared they were found to be identical, even as to punctuation. The theory was that when he failed to get his price the first time from Nugen, the scribe sold the speech to Allen, but had no scruples about letting the other have a copy.

The unfortunate man is a peddier, but has been out of work for some time. Within the last three days he has sold nearly all of his furniture to get food to keep himself and family alive. Of all the cases of destitution reported this winter this ig undoubtedly the saddest. The lady was confined on the floor six asy ago. The father, a help-less invalid, and two children are dependant on the mother and young daughter for support, which they manage by washing, but they find it impossible to get work, as so many of their patrons are out of work themselves. I fear they will suffer unless they are looked after.

SWAIM'S TRIBULATIONS.

pecial Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, January 1.—Among the faces and figures "conspicuous by their absence" from the White House on Thursday, was that of Gen. Swaim. He has been so much there, and has figured there so prominently in the past, that his absence is the more noted. The General feels his troubles very he is seen, one is startled to see how much he has vitality. He walks now with the heavy, spiritiess step of an old and broken man, instead of with the step of an old and broken man, instead of with the elastic tread of the soldier of forty-five or afty that he was. On the whole, Swaim has grown in public estimation as the trial has dragged its length along. Some people are beginning to suspect that the attack upon him is a piece of malice on the part of the army officers who were vexed that he was elevated into place over their heads, or who thought he was attempting to put on too many airs. The latter was, in fact, a pretty well founded belief. Swaim's mismake was in setting up his judgment as Judge Advocate-General against the authority of the Secretary of War, and trying to make out that he was greater than the master. Had he not done this he would probably have been at the President's New Year's reception in his full uniform and feeling his oats as well as usual. There is a good deal of curiosity, however, to see what the 'packed jury will do with his case. Those who have followed the testimony, which is all in for the prosecution, say that it contained nothing to sustain the charges.

Word comes to some friends of Blanche Rooseveit, the fair cantatrice and authoress, that she is in Paris hard at work upon a literary venture of some sort which, it is believed, is to bring her fame and wealth. It is probably not generally understood what keeps the pretty Blanche and her young Italian husband abroad so much. Her husband, whom she married some four or five years ago, is of a nobie Italian family, but like many of that sort, impecuations. He has an uncle who has both a fortune and a title, and when that long-living individual dies the title and mooey descend to young Micarre, when Blanche will be not only a countess but a wealthy one. So they are content to plod along over there, watching for the old man to step out of the way. Blanche doing some literary work in Paris part of the time and spending a portion of each year in Italy, as is required by her marriage contract. Their ambition is to get into the diplomatic service of Italy. It will be remembered that the pretty Blanche was here some three years ago, and made several calls upon the President, quite taking him by storm, it is said, with her regal beauty. Well, she told him then, as the story goes, that her Italian hubby wanted to get into the diplomatic service, and that it was believed that if he could get appointed as "Consular Agent" of the United States in Italy, a position with little or no salary, but some privileges, he could, by the influence of his father, who is a prominent officer of the Gevernment, there get a diplomatic appointment from his own Government. How it was that he did not get the place has not transpired. Banche's friends here were told that it had been promised, but the name does not appear in the list of this sort of officers of this Government, and as pretty Blanche is still helding her nose upon the literary grindston

Judge Horner, in deciding the divorce case of John F. Lambrecht against Marie T. The first day that Grady was there they had a round ball of butter about as big as a lemon and as hard as Pharaoh's heart. The butter-knife had a handle that would turn every time any one tried to get a lick at the butter, and the little round ball would flop over on the other side and smile. Now and then a hired man would reach over with his own knife and make a slash at it, but the butter, confident of of its own strength, would tip over with a dull thud, and the man would heave a sigh and give it up. Then another farm hand would make a dash at it, but burst into tears and quit. Finally Grady, who had watched this performance several days, jabbed his fork down through the middle of the yellow chunk and successfully cut it in two. In the center was a small, solid wooden top. "There," says Grady, "I've found out what the blamed thing is wound on, anyhow."

Custom House.

It is a singular thing that Yankee ingenuity has never had a chance to distinguish itself on the swinging doors at the Custom House entrances. From morning till night there is a steady and ear splitting bombardment as the resonant wooden frames fly back and forth on their powerful hinges. The doors fit so tight, too that they are practically air tight, and some of the results of this phenomenal accuracy in door hanging are quite langhable. When they are suddenly swung open the rush of air from the inside is something like a hurricane, and persons that have just stepped up to enter have been known to be whirled around by the swift suction with great damage to their equilibrium and spiritual prospects. It is also reported that there is a well authenticated instance of a lady having a set of false teeth blown right down her throat. The noise of the slamming is now one of the most unpleasant features about such an admirable provision against the cold, and why it is not remedied is incomprehensible to those who understand that the Government buildings are supposed to be nearly perfect in the minutest detail. The doors fit so tight, too, that they are

NO. 1T'S A FACT. The material is English ribbed cheviot, bought and imported by ourselves, and as fine and fashionable as any merchant tailor has in the plece. They're cut in two styles—4-Button Cutaway and Single-Breasted Sack. The colors—a rich and beautiful brown and as pretty a shade of dark green as you ever aaw—or we wouldn't have bought it. The Vests are cut very high, with collars, and the Trousers rather close—regular custom shape. Tailor prices for just such suits are $50 and $60, and make no mistake.

Although our common-sense REDUCED PRICES cover Men's and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Trousers OF ALL GRADES, we haven't time to enumerate them now, but will from day to day.

You may rest assured that prices have reached the very bottom. The only further downward movements are reasonably sure to be exceptional.
